

HBCUs Form Global Connections Through Fulbright

Since 1946, the Fulbright Program has given hundreds of thousands of students, scholars, teachers, artists, and professionals the opportunity to study, teach, conduct research, exchange ideas, and contribute to finding solutions to complex global challenges. The partnership between Historically Black Colleges and Universities (HBCUs) and Fulbright dates back to the founding of the program. Fisk University President Dr. Charles S. Johnson was on the first Fulbright board in the 1940s and the first Fulbright cohort included four participants affiliated with HBCUs.

Welcome International Students and Scholars to Your Campus

Fulbright visiting students and scholars contribute to institutional internationalization strategies and support curriculum needs when they share their expertise, establish international research partnerships and build international networks.

The Fulbright Scholar-in-Residence Program funds non-U.S. scholars to teach at institutions that wish to increase their international efforts. The Outreach Lecturing Fund covers the cost for institutions to host Fulbright Visiting Scholars, who are already in the United States, for short-term visits to present on academic disciplines and cultural understanding.

The Fulbright Visiting Scholar Program brings approximately 900 foreign scholars to research and lecture for up to a year at U.S. colleges and universities. Scholars apply in their home country for Fulbright awards through the local Fulbright Commission or U.S. Embassy.

The Foreign Language Teaching Assistant Program funds early career English teachers from overseas to teach over 35 languages at U.S. colleges and universities. FLTA institutional hosts support their students in learning foreign languages, developing multi-cultural competencies and preparing for a global marketplace.

The Fulbright Foreign Student Program brings 4,000 graduate students, early career professionals, and artists from abroad annually to conduct research and study in the United States, and take part in Fulbright seminars where they learn about American culture and volunteer in local communities.

Fulbright HBCU Institutional Leaders

Each year, the Fulbright Program recognizes HBCU Institutional Leaders for sending and hosting U.S. and international Fulbright students, scholars, and specialists as well as on-campus engagement and support of the Fulbright Program.

"We are dedicated to ensuring that our faculty and students can pursue international collaboration and enrichment experiences which they bring back to campus for the benefit of our whole community. This is yet another layer of academic excellence that helps prepare our students for global citizenship, and we are thrilled to contribute to global conversations this way."

FAYETTEVILLE STATE UNIVERSITY, CHANCELLOR DARRELL T. ALLISON, J.D.

Support Your U.S. Students, Faculty, and Administrators in Going Abroad

HBCUs can engage with the Fulbright Program by designating a Fulbright Program Adviser to support student applicants to the program and by appointing a Fulbright Scholar Liaison to promote faculty participation. Fulbright offers extensive training and resources for these primary points of contact. We welcome the involvement of campus leadership and senior international officers, as well as deans and international education administrators. Learn more about Fulbright Program Advisers at fpa@iie.org and Fulbright Scholar Liaisons at outreach@iie.org.

For faculty, administrators, and professionals

Fulbright U.S. Scholar Awards allow approximately 800 U.S. academics and professionals at all levels to teach or conduct research in one of 135 host countries.

The Fulbright International Education Administrators Awards enable U.S. higher education administrators to learn about other countries' higher education systems.

Special initiatives such as the Fulbright Public Policy Fellowship and the Fulbright Arctic and Fulbright Amazonia Programs bring U.S. experts in specific fields and regions together to engage with their counterparts abroad on shared priorities.

The Fulbright Specialist Program sends experienced U.S. faculty and professionals to serve as expert consultants and engage in education and training activities for a period of two to six weeks.

For graduating seniors, graduate students, and recent graduates

The Fulbright U.S. Student Program allows approximately 2,000 U.S. graduating college seniors, graduate students, young professionals, and artists to pursue graduate or professional studies, and conduct research abroad.

The Fulbright English Teaching Assistant Program places U.S. recent college graduates and young professionals abroad to teach English in primary through university level classrooms.

The Fulbright-National Geographic Award enhances U.S. citizens' research/study projects on globally significant themes, and the Fulbright-Fogarty Fellowship in Public Health promotes research by U.S. medical students and graduate researchers in resource-limited settings.

Fulbright Supports DEIA

With a commitment to diversity, equity, inclusion, and accessibility (DEIA) in all aspects of its work, the Fulbright Program recruits and supports diverse student and scholar applicants and institutions, taking concerted steps to ensure that participants from all backgrounds and all types of institutions have successful and rewarding experiences before, during, and after their exchange.

"I am the person that Fulbright made me—a continuous learner and striver, an avid proselytizer for international education, an advocate of the broadest possible learning experiences, and a believer in the power of human understanding. Fulbright lifted me out of a narrow world where little seemed possible, made me lift my eyes to the horizon, and enabled me to embrace what might be possible if only I reached out."
